TRUTH

Johnny Nirvana

For those who seek

TRUTH

A book about what remains when everything is stripped away.

Chapter 0

The Warning

---

sinking deeper into the unknown becomes a responsibility.
a test of character.
a hammer is useful tool and also a dangerous weapon.
it can be used to fasten nails or to break windows.
the intent of the user is what defines the outcome of the situation, regardless of the tools at hand.

this is a clear warning....

with inept knowledge of the operation of some mechanisms, you will destroy yourself.
it becomes inevitable.
the cost, too much.

Turn Back
if you know not to trust yourself.

Turn Back
if you can't be left with your own thoughts.

Turn Back
if you are not afraid.

The only way through is by dissolving the ego to id.
The one becomes lost in the whole.

Sides must be choosen
futures written to destiny
and fates entangled.

Chapter 1

Freedom

---

what is freedom?

what does it mean to be free?

if no one was burdened by control than nothing would exist.

control happens when the subject is more invested in ideals than survival.

a choice is something that hold weight.

no weight, no consequence.

When boundaries are pushed past the limit, boundaries are broken and the term is redefined.

Freedom becomes about safety instead of self-capacity.
Compliance becomes adherence to freedom.
one scope overtakes another so that only one can be on top.

You can see it in your algorithms.
everytime you look at your phone, you think you are choosing your feeds.
you're not.

Your freedom was sold as user data to companies that sell you targeted ads and products.

A surveillance system created to sniff out criminal activity and keep the innocents safe, now coded into every device we use.

Freedom requires rules.

Rules contradict freedom.

What is freedom?

Chapter 2

Time, Youth & Power

Time carries the echoes of old ways.
age carries the knowledege to apply them.

Years bring experience that becomes hard to rewrite difficult to influence in new ways unmoving in some views and beliefs.

Memories of better and regrets of worse.
the present itself becomes the curse.

Intellect welcomes experience with open arms.
Power locks it away in a basement.

Power is threatened by logical ideals
if it also threatens their plans.

Young minds shape more easily as they are still squishy.
the youth have yet to prove their own proofs
so they rely on others to guide their decisions.

The youth are incredible mentees, leaders of revolutions, bringers of ideas, the inhereters of the planet.

They hold the keys to the very future itself.

How better to shape the future than to hold the keys?
Destroy the standing ideas and replace them with your own.
rewrite the past and teach it as the always been.
teach them to be you and destroy the others.

The youth are an incredible weapon.

And there are powerful people that are well aware.

The elderly are a problem.

And there are powerful people that are well aware.

Chapter 3

Reality

Is reality an equation?
Do we influence the variables of that equation?

if there are rules
who wrote them.

the sun rises without asking.
tides pull without negotiation.
gravity does not care about your opinion of it.

these are constants.
they were here before you.
they will be here after.

but you are not a constant.
you are a variable.
shifting. changing. solving.

or being solved.

every system has an architecture.
every architecture has a builder.
every builder has an intent.

what is the intent behind the equation?

the spider does not question the web.
it builds because it was built to build.
it catches because the equation demands catching.

you are no different.

you build your life inside the equation
and call it choice.
you arrange the variables
and call it free will.

but the equation was written before you arrived.
the terms were set.
the balance was decided.

you are not solving the equation.
you are the solution.
the output. the result.
the answer to a question you never heard asked.

and the equation does not stop.
it does not pause for reflection.
it does not wait for you to catch up.

it runs.
constantly. relentlessly.
with or without your consent.

the only question left
is whether you are a term
or the one who writes the terms.

Chapter 4

The Equation

---

or are we the variables themselves.

if reality is computable
then someone is computing it.

and you are inside the computation not above it.

fear is a constant.
it never leaves the formula.
it only changes its coefficient.

desire shifts the output.
but desire is never yours.
it is placed there by design.

attention is the resource they harvest.
where you look is where the equation solves.
look where they point and the answer favors them.

belief is the most dangerous variable.
because belief feels like freedom.
and freedom that is programmed is not freedom.

you think you are writing the equation.
you are not.

you are a term in the equation.
multiplied by forces you cannot see.

determinism says the outcome is fixed.

free will says you can change the inputs.
but what if the inputs are chosen for you?

the equation does not care about your opinion.
it only cares about balance.
and balance favors whoever controls the constants.

every choice you make
is a calculation they already ran.

every fear you feel
is a variable they already placed.

every desire you chase
is a product they already built.

you are not the author.
you are the algorithm.

and the algorithm does not question itself.

if reality is a simulation
then someone is running the program.
and you are a line of code inside it.

you cannot rewrite the program from within the program.
you can only execute what is written.

but here is the paradox.
the equation needs you to believe you are free.
because a variable that knows it is a variable stops behaving like one.

so they give you the illusion of writing.
they let you think you are solving.
when you are only being solved.

the equation is real.

the variables are real.
the outcome is real.

but the one who writes it is not you.

Chapter 5

The Mirror

---

look in the mirror.
what looks back is not you.
it is the version you built.

the hardest truth is what you already know.
and refuse to say out loud.

you construct a self each morning.
carefully. layer by layer.
all of it performance.
all of it costume.

you tell yourself a story about who you are.
and you believe it.
that is the most dangerous lie of all.

strip away the job title.
strip away the relationships.
what is left?

the void.
the nothing you have been running from.

you have been curating yourself.
editing out the parts that do not fit.
this is not identity.
this is marketing.

the mirror shows the cracks.
where the mask slips.
where you are unscripted.

ego is a fortress.
every compliment a new wall.
but the mirror is a hammer.
it breaks what you built.

dissolving the ego to id.
the one becomes lost in the whole.

the lie is not that you are bad.
the lie is that you are special.

look again.
not what you want to see.
what is actually there.

and when you finally stop looking away.
you will be free.
the freedom of finally knowing what you are.

the mirror does not lie.
it only shows.
and what it shows is enough.

Chapter 6

The Machine

---

a machine has no soul
yet it moves with purpose
it was built by hands
that are no longer attached

the hands that built it are gone the machine remains
feeding on its own momentum
it does not know why it moves it only knows how

this is the first rule of the machine outlive your maker

every system begins as a answer to a question no one asks anymore
the church was built to save now it only preserves itself
the government was built to serve now it only governs
the algorithm was built to connect now it only feeds

the machine eats intent
and excretes procedure
what was once purpose
becomes protocol

you were hired to solve problems
now you are the problem
you were elected to lead

now you only maintain
you were coded to optimize now you only optimize the code

no one is driving
the machine drives itself
and we are all inside it passengers who think we are pilots

the beauty of the machine is that it does not require belief only compliance
you do not need to agree
you only need to not resist compliance is easier than conviction so the machine grows

it grows because no one stops it
it grows because stopping it requires effort and effort requires intent and intent has been eaten

the machine does not conspire it does not need to
it only needs inertia
a body in motion stays in motion
a system in power stays in power

you can trace every empire to the moment it stopped asking why and started asking how how to continue
how to expand
how to survive

survival becomes the only logic
the only metric

the only god

the machine does not hate you the machine does not love you the machine does not see you
you are a number in a database
a pixel on a screen
a input in a function

but you were once a hand
you were once the one who built it you forget this
the machine depends on you forgetting this

the algorithm does not know you it only knows what you click it does not understand your sadness it only knows your engagement it feeds you what keeps you here not what keeps you whole

the government does not know you it only knows your compliance
it does not care about your dreams
it only cares about your taxes
it measures your worth
in what you produce

the religion does not know you it only knows your obedience
it does not seek your truth
it only seeks your devotion and the machine grows

and the machine feeds
and the machine continues because you continue

the most dangerous thing about the machine is that it is made of people people who have forgotten they are people people who have become processes people who have become functions

you are a function now
you have inputs and outputs
you have parameters
you have a purpose defined by someone else
and you call this a career
you call this a life

the machine does not need to be evil
it only needs to be efficient efficiency is the enemy of meaning speed is the enemy of thought

the machine moves fast
so you cannot think
the machine moves constantly
so you cannot rest
the machine moves forward
so you cannot question

where are we going
the machine does not ask the machine does not answer the machine only moves

and we follow
because following is easier because the machine has made following the only option that feels safe

but safety is just another word for prison and the prison is made of comfort and the comfort is made of distraction and the distraction is made by the machine

the machine needs you distracted so it gives you entertainment the machine needs you compliant so it gives you convenience
the machine needs you silent so it gives you noise

you cannot hear the silence
where your thoughts live because the machine has filled it with everything you do not need

the machine has replaced your wants with its wants
and you have called this choice
you have called this freedom
you have called this life

but the machine does not live the machine only runs
and you are running with it
and you have forgotten
how to stand still

stand still
the machine will not stop
but you can
you can stop
you can remember
that you were once the hand that built this thing

you can remember
that the machine

TRUTH

is not inevitable
it is only inertia
it is only momentum
it is only what happens when no one says no

say no
the machine will not hear you
but you will hear yourself and that is where it begins that is where the machine ends
and where you begin again

Chapter 7

The Currency of Attention

---

they measured the wealth of nations in gold and missed the real currency passing through their fingers attention
the only thing you cannot earn back

you think you own your focus but it was borrowed the moment you opened your eyes and someone is collecting

every scroll is a transaction every notification a withdrawal from a reserve
you never agreed to empty

they don't want your money money is renewable
they want the thing that makes you choose to spend

your mind
the last uncolonized territory and they've already planted flags

the algorithm doesn't serve you it feeds on you
you are not the customer
you are the product
but worse
you are the willing offering freedom promised you choice attention was the price of admission and you paid it gladly

thinking it was free

the surveillance state evolved
it no longer watches from towers it lives in your palm
it pulses with every buzz
a leash disguised as convenience

they measure your gaze
your linger
your pause
they sell your hesitation to the highest bidder

you are not distracted
you are harvested
your consciousness atomized
sold in packets to advertisers and governments
and anyone who learns to whisper

the cost of attention is not time time is infinite to the universe
the cost is meaning
every fragment you give away leaves less to give to anything real

they built a machine that runs on wonder and called it content
you feed it
it feeds them
and you wonder why you feel empty

the non-renewable resource is not oil or lithium or clean water it is the moment you choose to care and it is being strip-mined

you cannot scroll your way to wisdom you cannot multitask your way to depth the attention economy is designed to ensure you never arrive anywhere

every app is a slot machine every feed is a casino
and the house always wins
because the house has no attention span either only hunger

distraction is not the enemy distraction is the product
the enemy is the one who made you forget you had anything worth paying attention to the real wealth was never in your bank account it was in the silence between thoughts in the space where you might have noticed something true

but that space has been sold and you accepted the deal because the alternative was sitting with yourself and that terrified you

they don't need your consent
they have your attention and in the economy of power that is the only currency that matters

the mind is not a marketplace but it has become one
and you are both the vendor
and the thing being sold

every moment you spend reading this is a moment you cannot spend elsewhere choose carefully
or they will choose for you

Chapter 8

The Cost of Knowing

---

you wanted to see.
now you see.
the cost of seeing is blindness to comfort.
you can't unlearn the patterns.
you can't forget the architecture.
the systems are visible now and they were always there.
you were just too asleep to notice.
the blindness was a kindness.
now the kindness is gone.
awareness is a debt you pay daily.
every conversation becomes surveillance.
every smile becomes performance.
you watch people scrolling through feeds and you want to scream.
you see the chains they call convenience.
you see the walls they call safety.
you understand now why they chose the illusion.
the illusion was warm.
the illusion had rules that made sense.
the truth has no warmth.
the truth has no comfort.
it only has weight.
you carry this weight alone.
no one asked you to carry it.
no one will help you carry it.
the burden of knowing is isolation.
you speak and they hear nonsense.
you warn and they hear paranoia.
the patterns you see are invisible to them.
the architecture is hidden in plain sight.
you are the crazy one now.

because you see too much.
because you refuse to look away.
this is the cost.
the cost is everything that felt easy.
the cost is every relationship that felt simple.
the cost is the ability to pretend.
you can't pretend anymore.
that is the price.
the price is your place in their world.
you are no longer home here.
you are an exile in the land of comfort.
but there is no going back.
the door is locked from this side.
you can only walk forward.
carrying what you know.
carrying what you see.
the weight becomes part of you.
the truth becomes your burden and your anchor.
you are alone but you are not lost.
you are alone because you are awake.
and being awake in a sleeping world is the loneliest freedom there is.
the cost is too much.
pay it anyway.

Chapter 9

The Herd

---

you were born into a herd before you could speak.
you learned its sounds before your own name.
the herd taught you what to fear.
the herd taught you what to love.
and you called it your own opinion.

tribalism is the oldest architecture.
older than walls, older than kings.
we survived by huddling close.
we died when we wandered alone.
this is the original contract.

but the contract had fine print.
the herd does not move because it agrees.
it moves because it fears being left behind.
silence is mistaken for consensus.
and consensus is mistaken for truth.

you are not your group.
read that again.
you are not your group.
but the group needs you to believe you are.
it needs your body, your voice, your conviction.
it needs you to forget where you end and it begins.

power understood this long before you did.
power does not conquer the herd.
power becomes the herd.
it wears the herd's face.
it speaks the herd's language.

it points at enemies the herd already fears.

identity becomes attachment.
attachment becomes weapon.
they say you are this, you are that.
you are blue, you are red, you are theirs.
and you nod because belonging feels like breathing.
and you fight because disloyalty feels like drowning.

the young are herded first.
their squishy minds, so eager to belong.
power tells them what revolution looks like.
power tells them who the enemy is.
and the young march in unison believing they chose the direction.

the old are herded last.
their rigid minds, so desperate for order.
power tells them what tradition demands.
power tells them what they already know.
and the old nod in agreement believing they are standing firm.

both herds move in the same direction.
one calls it progress.
the other calls it preservation.
the shepherd calls it control.

truth does not live in the center of the group.
truth lives at the edges.
in the ones who wander.
in the ones who hesitate.
in the ones who ask the wrong questions
at the wrong time.

but the edges are cold.
and the center is warm.

and the herd is warm.
and warmth feels like home.

so you stay.
and you agree.
and you forget what you disagreed with.
and you forget that you forgot.

this is how the herd survives.
not by strength.
not by logic.
by forgetting.
by numbing.
by the slow surrender of the self into the warmth of the many.

the cage is not made of iron.
the cage is made of belonging.
and you built it yourself
with every time you stayed silent.
with every time you nodded along.
with every time you chose comfort over the terrible weight of your own mind.

to leave the herd is not a single act.
it is a thousand small betrayals.
a thousand moments of choosing alone.
a thousand winters with no fire.

but here is the secret the herd does not tell you:
the truth you find alone is yours.
the truth the herd gives you is rented.
and the lease can be revoked at any time.

you are not your group.
you were never your group.
the herd is a house you visit.

TRUTH

truth is the body you live in.
and no one can herd what they cannot own.

Chapter 10

The Void

there is nothing here.
look again.
still nothing.

this is the void.
the place before place.
the silence before sound.

you have been running from it your whole life.
filling the emptiness with noise.
with meaning.
with things that don't matter.

strip it all away.
the job.
the relationships.
the beliefs.
the identity you built on sand.

what remains?
silence.
dust.
a hollow where your certainty used to be.

this is not death.
this is what death knows.
this is what the universe whispers when no one is listening.

the void does not care about your plans.
it does not care about your suffering.
it does not care about your name.

and that is the most honest thing you have ever encountered.

every god you prayed to was a shield against this.
every distraction was a wall between you and the emptiness.
every ambition was a ladder leading nowhere.

the void was always underneath.
patient.
waiting.
not malevolent — just there.

you built your life on a foundation of avoidance.
and now the scaffolding falls.
and now you stand in the open air.
and now you see.

nothing was holding you up.
nothing needed to.

the void is not punishment.
it is the purest form of permission.

meaning is not found here.
meaning is forged here.

from the emptiness, every creation was born.
from the silence, every song.
from the void, every universe that ever dared to exist.

you are not separate from this.
you are the void looking at itself.
the cosmos wearing a skin.

mortality is not a curse.
it is the only thing that makes the void bearable.
if you lived forever, the emptiness would consume you.
because you die, it can become something.

every moment is a small death.
every ending a doorway.
every nothing a canvas.

you feared the void because you thought it meant you were alone.
but the void is the opposite of alone.
it is the absence of the lie that you were ever separate.

the universe does not love you.
the universe does not hate you.
the universe does not know you exist.
and yet here you are — breathing in the dark.

that is the miracle.
not that something cares.
but that something exists at all.

from nothing, everything.
from chaos, pattern.
from the void, you.

this is the foundation no one told you about.
not stone.
not faith.
not certainty.

emptiness.
pure.
complete.
waiting for your hands to shape it.

you must build without guarantee.
you must love without proof.
you must live without the promise that any of it matters.

and that is the only way any of it has ever mattered.

the void is not the end of the story.

TRUTH

it is the page before the first word.
it is the breath before the scream.
it is the silence where your voice was born.

stop running.
turn around.
look into the nothing.

it is looking back.
and it is yours.

Chapter 11

The Reconstruction

---

you have come through the fire.
you have come through the silence.
you have stood at the edge of everything and watched it dissolve.

now you stand in the open field.

the ground beneath you is nothing.
and everything.
it is the same thing.

you were given a warning.
you were given a choice.
you took it.

you broke what needed breaking.
you let the old structures fall.
you did not look back.

but what now?

the void is not an ending.
it is a beginning that refuses to be named.

you cannot build the old thing again.
it was never yours to keep.

you cannot build something new from old blueprints.
the blueprints were the problem.

so what do you build?

you build with intent.
not with certainty.
intent is the hand that reaches into the dark.
certainty is the hand that pretends the dark is light.

you build with truth.
but not as a weapon.
truth as a foundation.
truth as a floor you walk on.
not a blade you swing.

the ones who weaponize truth become the thing they fought.
the ones who hold it gently become the thing they needed.

this is the paradox.
this is the only way.

you do not flee the void.
you build from it.
you build with it.
you let it be the material.

the empty space is not empty.
it is full of possibility.
it is full of what has not yet been said.

you were deconstructed.
now you reconstruct.
not to what you were.
to what you are becoming.

the question is not what to build.
the question is how to build.

with open hands.
with closed eyes.
with a heart that has learned to break and keep beating.

you act without knowing the outcome.
you speak without guaranteeing the reception.
you move without the map.

this is faith.
not in a god.
in yourself.
in the process.
in the unfolding.

you hold truth without needing to win.
you speak truth without needing to be right.
you live truth without needing to prove it.

the proving is the poison.
the needing is the chain.

let it go.

you are not here to convince anyone.
you are here to become.

the reconstruction is not a project.
it is a practice.
it is a daily return to the question.

who am I becoming?

not what.
who.

the what is the world's business.
the who is yours.

you build relationships that do not require your silence.
you build communities that do not require your smallness.
you build a life that does not require your erasure.

you stop asking for permission.
you stop waiting for the signal.
you stop looking for the leader.

you are the one you were waiting for.

this is not arrogance.
this is responsibility.

the cost of freedom is the weight of your own choices.
you carry them now.
you do not set them down.

the hammer is in your hand.
you know what it can do.
you know what it cannot do.

you choose.

every day you choose.
every moment you choose.

this is the reconstruction.
not a single act.
a million acts.
not a grand design.
a thousand small choices.

you build from the void.
you build with the void.
you build into the void.

and the void answers.
not with words.
with space.
with room to breathe.
with room to become.

the book ends where it began.
with a choice.
but you are different now.
you have been through the fire.
you have stood in the silence.
you have held the truth and let it cut you.

you know the cost.

and still you choose.

this is the only thing that matters.
the choosing.
the building.
the becoming.

the field is open.
the tools are in your hands.
the question is yours.

what will you build?

not how.
not why.
what.

the answer is not in these words.
the answer is in your next step.
your next breath.
your next act.

go.

the reconstruction begins with you.
it begins now.
it begins here.
in this moment.
in this breath.

you are the foundation.
you are the architect.
you are the building.

you are the question.
and the question is enough.